

Florette holds a degree in Computer Science and has dedicated the past 8 years to making significant strides in the tech industry. Recognizing the disparity in representation, Florette founded "Command Add Girls," a non-profit organization aimed at empowering women of color to pursue and thrive in tech careers. Driven by passion and commitment, Florette is not only a seasoned tech professional but also a fervent advocate for diversity and inclusion. With a deep understanding of the challenges faced by underrepresented groups, Florette continues to work towards creating a more equitable tech landscape. Outside of her professional endeavours, Florette enjoys travelling, serving the community, and spending time with her family.
